The use of “charitable” contributions in resolving criminal and infraction cases

In 2007, concerns arose regarding the procedure in some areas of having defendants make charitable contributions to county or private organizations as part of an agreement in which a criminal or infraction charge was dismissed. In response, Chief Justice Gerald F. Schroeder wrote a memo, addressed to all district judges and magistrate judges, reminding them of the legal and ethical hazards of such arrangements, and pointing out that payments by defendants should be assessed and distributed only as provided in state law. Click here for the memo and the materials that were distributed with it. We are providing this material not in response to any recurrence of the type of situation that prompted the memo, but because this memo was the subject of some recent discussion, and we believe it would be helpful for all judges to have convenient access to this memo and to be reminded of the concerns that it addresses.

Wellness Tip

At orientation programs for new judges and their spouses or guests in Indiana, panelists recommend taking two-week vacations rather than two one-week vacations. Two full weeks can make a big difference in offsetting the pressures of judicial service for judges and their households. New energy seems to result from taking a break that long from demanding routines. Click here to read full article.
