PER CURIAM

Virgil James Heck pled guilty to possession of a controlled substance (methamphetamine), Idaho Code § 37-2732(c)(1). As part of the plea agreement, the district court sentenced Heck to a unified term of six years, with two years determinate, but suspended the sentence and placed Heck on probation. Subsequently, Heck incurred new criminal charges, which constituted a violation of his probation. Pursuant to a plea agreement, Heck pled guilty to possession of a controlled substance (methamphetamine), I.C. § 37-2732(c)(1), in the second case and admitted to a probation violation in his previous case. The district court sentenced Heck to a unified term of seven years, with three years determinate, to run consecutively to Heck’s sentence in the first case. After revoking Heck’s probation and executing the underlying sentence in the first case, the district court also retained jurisdiction in both cases.

Upon review of the period of retained jurisdiction, the district court suspended Heck's sentences and placed him on probation in both cases. Shortly thereafter, Heck admitted to violating his probation. The district court consequently revoked probation and executed the underlying sentences without reduction in both cases. The two cases were consolidated on appeal.

After filing this appeal, and before assignment to this Court, Heck filed a motion to augment the record with additional transcripts. The State objected in part and the Idaho Supreme Court entered an order granting Heck's motion in part and denying Heck's motion in part as to some of the requested transcripts. Heck then filed a renewed motion to augment the record with the denied transcripts, which the State objected to. The Idaho Supreme Court entered an order denying Heck's motion.

On appeal Heck argues that the Idaho Supreme Court denied him due process, equal protection, and effective assistance of counsel by denying his renewed motion to augment the record. Heck also contends that the district court abused its discretion by revoking probation and executing his sentences without reduction.

A. Denial of Renewed Motion to Augment Record

Heck asks this Court to hold that the Idaho Supreme Court deprived him of due process, equal protection, and effective assistance of counsel when it denied his renewed motion to augment the record. We do not, however, have the authority to review and, in effect, reverse an Idaho Supreme Court decision on a motion made prior to assignment of the case to this Court on the ground that the Supreme Court decision was contrary to the state or federal constitutions or other law. See State v. Morgan, 153 Idaho 618, 620, 288 P.3d 835, 837 (Ct. App. 2012). Such an undertaking would be tantamount to the Court of Appeals entertaining an appeal from an Idaho Supreme Court decision and is plainly beyond the purview of this Court. Id. If a motion is renewed by the movant and new information or a new or expanded basis for the motion is presented to this Court that was not presented to the Supreme Court, we deem it within the authority of this Court to evaluate and rule on the renewed motion in the exercise of our responsibility to address all aspects of an appeal from the time of assignment to this Court. Id. Such may occur if the appellant's or respondent's briefs have refined, clarified, or expanded issues on appeal in such a way as to demonstrate the need for additional records or transcripts, or where new evidence is presented to support a renewed motion. Id.

Heck has not filed with this Court a renewed motion to augment the record or presented to this Court in his briefing any significant new facts or a new justification for augmentation beyond that already advanced in his motion to the Supreme Court. In essence, Heck asks us to determine that the Idaho Supreme Court violated constitutional law by denying his motion.

We adhere to our conclusion in Morgan that reviewing the denial of a motion to augment the record by the Supreme Court is beyond the scope of our authority. If a party files a renewed motion after the case assignment to this Court and presents new information or justification for the motion, we have the authority to rule on the motion. Heck had an opportunity to present his constitutional arguments to the Supreme Court and that Court denied his motions. He has no right to appeal that denial to the Idaho Court of Appeals, and we have no authority to consider such an appeal.

B. Revocation of Probation and Review of Sentences

It is within the trial court's discretion to revoke probation if any of the terms and conditions of the probation have been violated. I.C. §§ 19-2603, 20-222; State v. Beckett, 122 Idaho 324, 325, 834 P.2d 326, 327 (Ct. App. 1992); State v. Adams, 115 Idaho 1053, 1054, 772 P.2d 260, 261 (Ct. App. 1989); State v. Hass, 114 Idaho 554, 558, 758 P.2d 713, 717 (Ct. App. 1988). In determining whether to revoke probation, a court must examine whether the probation is achieving the goal of rehabilitation and is consistent with the protection of society. State v. Upton, 127 Idaho 274, 275, 899 P.2d 984, 985 (Ct. App. 1995); Beckett, 122 Idaho at 325, 834 P.2d at 327; Hass, 114 Idaho at 558, 758 P.2d at 717. The court may, after a probation violation has been established, order that the suspended sentence be executed or, in the alternative, the court is authorized under Idaho Criminal Rule 35 to reduce the sentence. Beckett, 122 Idaho at 325, 834 P.2d at 327; State v. Marks, 116 Idaho 976, 977, 783 P.2d 315, 316 (Ct. App. 1989). A decision to revoke probation will be disturbed on appeal only upon a showing that the trial court abused its discretion. Beckett, 122 Idaho at 325, 834 P.2d at 327. In reviewing the propriety of a probation revocation, the focus of the inquiry is the conduct underlying the trial court's decision to revoke probation. Morgan, 153 Idaho at 621, 288 P.3d at 838. Thus, this Court will consider the elements of the record before the trial court relevant to the revocation of probation issues that are properly made part of the record on appeal. Id.

Sentencing is also a matter for the trial court's discretion. Both our standard of review and the factors to be considered in evaluating the reasonableness of a sentence are well established and need not be repeated here. See State v. Hernandez, 121 Idaho 114, 117-18, 822 P.2d 1011, 1014-15 (Ct. App. 1991); State v. Lopez, 106 Idaho 447, 449-51, 680 P.2d 869, 871-73 (Ct. App. 1984); State v. Toohill, 103 Idaho 565, 568, 650 P.2d 707, 710 (Ct. App. 1982). When reviewing the length of a sentence, we consider the defendant's entire sentence. State v. Oliver, 144 Idaho 722, 726, 170 P.3d 387, 391 (2007).

When we review a sentence that is ordered into execution following a period of probation, we examine the entire record encompassing events before and after the original judgment. State v. Hanington, 148 Idaho 26, 29, 218 P.3d 5, 8 (Ct. App. 2009). We base our review upon the facts existing when the sentence was imposed as well as events occurring between the original sentencing and the revocation of the probation. Id. Thus, this Court will consider the elements of the record before the trial court that are properly made part of the record on appeal and are relevant to the defendant's contention that the trial court should have reduced the sentence sua sponte upon revocation of probation. Morgan, 153 Idaho at 621, 288 P.3d at 838.

Applying the foregoing standards, and having reviewed the record in this case, we cannot say that the district court abused its discretion in revoking probation. Assuming Heck can challenge the district court's failure to sua sponte reduce his sentences, we also conclude that the district court did not err in ordering execution of Heck's underlying sentences without reduction. Therefore, the orders revoking probation and executing Heck's underlying sentences are affirmed.
