

SUMMARY STATEMENT

State v. Rebo, Docket No. 46451

The Idaho Supreme Court affirmed the district court's denial of Jesse Rebo's motion to suppress based on his lack of standing to pursue the motion. The Court held Rebo lacked standing to challenge a warrantless entry into his residence because a valid no contact order prohibited Rebo from being within three hundred feet of the residence. The Court held the valid no contact order that prohibited Rebo from being within three hundred feet of the residence rendered Rebo's subjective expectation of privacy objectively unreasonable and further held the no contact order removed Rebo's right to exclude law enforcement from the residence.
