

SUMMARY STATEMENT

Employers Resource Management Co. v. Kealy

Docket No. 46742

The Idaho Supreme Court affirmed the district court's determination that the Idaho Reimbursement Incentive Act is constitutional. After establishing competitor standing in its prior appeal against the Idaho Department of Commerce, Employers Resource Management Company argued that the Act was unconstitutional under the separation of powers doctrine. The Supreme Court explained that the Act (1) did not improperly delegate legislative authority and (2) did not limit judicial review.
