

SUMMARY STATEMENT

Walker v. Meyer, Docket No. 47952

The Idaho Supreme Court affirmed a district court judgment granting Adam Walker's breach of contract claim against Brent Meyer. On appeal, Meyer argued that the district court erred in concluding he was not a "construction professional" as defined by Idaho's Notice and Opportunity to Repair Act ("NORA"), Idaho Code sections 6-2501-04. The Idaho Supreme Court affirmed the district court after holding that there was an insufficient record to permit review. Specifically, based on the record, the Court was unable to determine when Meyer first raised NORA as a defense, and without a transcript of the bench trial, did not know what evidence was submitted at trial to support his claim that NORA applied.
