

Clean Slate Act

Clean Slate Act

If you have eligible criminal records in Idaho and it has been at least 5 years since the completion of your sentence, including all ordered probation, parole, fines, and restitution, you can file a request with the court to shield your records from public disclosure. Only one offense, or one set of offenses arising from a single incident or transaction, may be shielded. Shielding records does not result in the destruction of records but instead prevents them from being publicly accessible.
