Blended Learning Toolkit

A very important resource to help you understand the many operational principles and practices in a problem-solving court is called the Blended Learning Toolkit. This on-line educational resource contains a number of important self—paced learning modules that you can view as your time permits. This resource is found at:

http://www.drugcourtonline.org

When you go to this link you will open a page titled National Drug Court On-line Learning System. On the left side of the screen under the orange button called "login" you are invited to Create a Free Account. You will enter your e-mail address for your user name and create a password. That will give you login access for future visits. Also on the left side of the screen is an opportunity to use the "getting started guide". This will help explain the resources on the site.

You are strongly encouraged to complete the lessons in the Adult Drug Court Course module. If you can't go through all sections we suggest you pay particular attention to
- Essential Components of a Successful Drug Testing Program
- Understanding Drug Use and Addiction
- Sanctions and Incentives
- Confidentiality 42 CFR and HIPAA

The Blended Learning Toolkit is not only an important resource for you but for new team members who join your court and for continuing education for all team members together. Since one of your responsibilities is to determine the training needs of your team, the Blended Learning Toolkit is important for periodic team training events that you will organize and your judge will convene.
